

Run 49: 'The Neville Arms' Kinoulton
Sunday 17 February 1991

Was this to be the first Quorn Hash to be cancelled through adverse weather conditions? Was the hare going to be forced to lay off? So what is a bit of fluffy white stuff between dedicated hashers - certainly not a deterrent (nor detergent!)

Cars found their way to Kinoulton without a problem, in fact, the snow had cleared on the roads. As the pack gathered slowly, the well clad figures were eager to generate some warmth into their shivering bodies.

A quick pep talk on the trail from Zupada, informing us that the flour was visible on the snow and that the idea of mixing coloured poster paint, and coffee was abandoned as sheer silliness!

A whistle blew signalling the start (where is the Hash horn?) A very noticeable lack of checking on this run; well it isn't very often hashers can admire the fairytale scenery of a winter wonderland. The flour, resembling a disgusting creamy substance(!) spurred the few to run a longish straight road which warmed up the parts. A very clever check at the totally frozen Grantham Canal gave many choices of a possible trail. All were falsies leading back to the check! Suddenly a shriek of confidence and 'On-On' towards a steady 'On-Up' and into even deeper snow. Oh no! A maze of parallel bar checks had the pack criss-crossing the woods, bent double to dodge the trees. Footsteps had been cheekily backtracked to confuse the front runners. A fabulous view from the hill over Kinoulton. Quorn's first ever snow run and what an experience. Breaking out into a pristine field of glistening snow, the pack was ordered into two teams to be told to build a snowman in 10 minutes. After rearranging the snow for a radius of two miles, two sorry looking snowmen were promptly judged and subsequently demolished by the opposite team! Mango was picked up by Whisper and dropped on one of the snowman's head!! The branches used for arms were nearly the cause of an embarrassing moment.

Run 49:

'On Down' now, lots and lots of gorgeous deep snow (again) to work the leg muscles. Shitface and Elaine were quite springy of the step - well the end was in sight! Neil, our virgin of the day, clad in jeans and boots pressed on regardless. Wait till your Mother sees your filthy clothes!

A last spurt into the car park and the pack had grown considerably. Optimistic and the expectant Supercheck with yet another expectant Hasher, Trevor's wife, Lumpless (but she's only just given birth to Turd!) What do they do in the evenings to keep warm? (Answers on a postcard to JM).

A long line of shitty running shoes left by the pub door was a fitting end to a great hash trail.

10/10 for the weather
9/10 for the Flare (she may get big-headed)
0/10 for the JM and usual Mr Ed (missing) ← what?!
20/10 for the stand-in Ed (Schhhhh you know who)

Down Downs

- Neil - Virgin Hasher
- Paxo's son - New shoes
- Mango - Sitting on snowmen's faces!
- Zupada - Hare of the month - good run!
- Sly Fox - Not hashed for months and months (been making babies)

X Love and cuddles
